BIO

As the Founding Director and CEO for Australia for Cedar Tanzania, Nina has extensive experience in the delivery of impactful and sustainable Corporate Social Responsibility partnerships for all industries with a special focus on the mining industry.

With great insight and knowledge, Nina deliver the reasons why Africa matters and why International Development is important to us all.

Having lived in several countries across 3 continents, Nina expertly leads her team across borders, continents, and time zones.

Nina strongly advocates for not-for-profits to be lead and seen as businesses.

Nina originates from Denmark but has spent 13 years living in Tanzania. She now resides in Perth, Australia.

Some of Australia for Cedar Tanzania's core projects involves:

- Healthcare: Construction and Management of a hospital servicing 35,000 residents.
- Outreach Service: Mobile medical healthcare services provided to people who otherwise would go without. Specific focus on disabilities.
- Gender Empowerment: Prevention of Violence against Women and HIV/AIDS.
- HIV and Sex for Youth: Sports-led education on sexual and reproductive health and rights to adolescents.
- Entrepreneurship: Skill-based training for vulnerable groups. Tree planting and mushroom farming with access to international markets.

Cross-Sector Partnerships For The Win

How to make CSR an equal working relationship drawing on the strengths and expertise of both parties resulting in better impact and sustainable results.

What are the flaws and pitfalls with the current hand-out mentality for supporting local organisations.

Your Future Depends On Investing In African Women

When we invest in African women it increases economic growth and development. When women are empowered they become powerful catalysts for economic development.

Investing in African women reduces poverty, gender inequality, and social injustice leading to better global health and social outcomes.

Why Africa Matters To You

Creating sustainable economic growth throughout Sub-Saharan Africa is vital for global stability.

A growing population in need of jobs and quality of life has more impact on your day-to-day life than you think!

Why Mushrooms Are The Answer To Everything

Growing mushrooms in Tanzania has given us a pathway to reduce poverty, provide better nutrition, create jobs, equality, health, climate change, sustainability, and long-term funding of other projects!

Get the details of this inspiring and groundbreaking project stemming from a humble mushroom.
